Dear Harold,

I haven't heard from you for awhile so I thought I'd write to say hello and to find out how you're doing.

I'm still looking for a job. The park I worked for last summer called to find out if I was interested in working there again, so at least I'll have a job for the summer. I got called back to Rockwell for another interview and things look fairly promising there. One of my former rhetoric instructors has a good friend who is a speechwriter with Rockwell and he gave him a call and put in a good word for me. From what I've been told, they're interested in me for a job in their Communications Dept.; however, as of right now, I can't type as fast as the job requires. So now I'm taking a typing course at night and the person who interviewed me said that as soon as my typing improves, I have a job. Not only is the job exactly what I'm looking for, but Rockwell has an educational aid program that would pay my way through graduate or even law school. I could just kick myself for not having learned to type well long ago; if I had, I'd probably be working right now.

I've been meaning to write you since last month when you did the interview with Larry Ford. Larry is really interested in the assassinations and we've become good friends since the interview. He still insists that that was the most interesting interview he's ever done. A few weeks ago his show moved to a new time slot. Now he's on from 6 to midnight instead of midnight to 6 A.M. I talked to him a few days ago and he said that now that he's on at a decent time, he wants to have you do another show live. He got alot of good feedback about the interview, so much so that he re-broadcast it a few weeks later. I just hope that the people who called in after the interview with words of praise sent for some books.

When you get a chance, let me know what's happening with the appeal on spectro/NSA and with Ray.

Take care and say hello to Lil for me.

Best,
Karen
